

Los Angeles Report

April 2017

CONTENTS

* Project 1: Gold Line, Del Mar station

Gold Line, Del Mar station

Project Overview

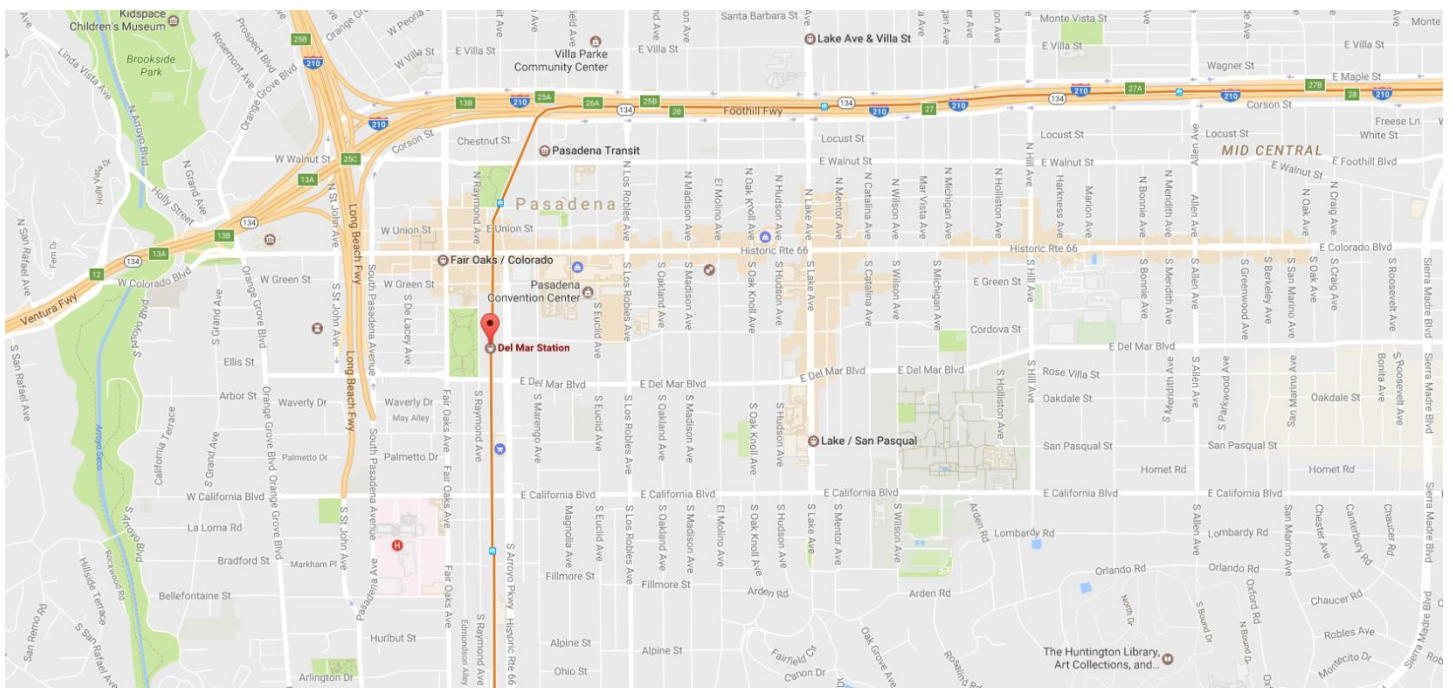

Del Mar is one of Los Angeles station of the Gold Line with a peculiar architecture for a station. Located near Old Town Pasadena, the station is near every location and is often described as a "work of art".

While the orange, gray and white buildings are all new development for housing, the upper middle low height cluster is the already existing compound of restaurants. An unique feature here is that Del Mar station is the end of the surface running train. From here on the train becomes a subway till the Pasadena. Historically preserved area, Pasadena is known for being a conservative and historically preserving city which is proved by the cleanliness of the station itself.

Project Details

1. Business : Rail way station and apartment building complex
2. Location: Pasadena, California 91105, United States
3. Target Customer: Everyone

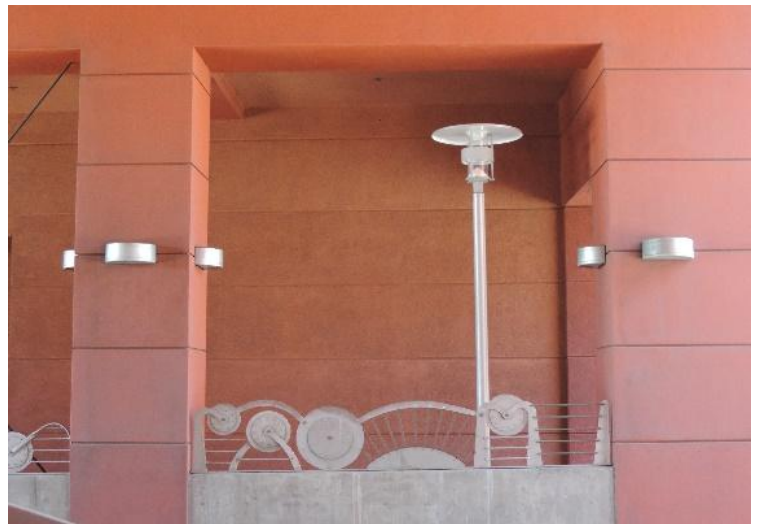

Location Map

Parallel to the station, the restaurants

A little plaza adjacent to the restaurants and the pink colored building.

Small art along the station promenade.

Steel work to synchronize the color of concrete.

Approaching Del Mar station, view on the apartment units

All this building structure is called Type -V, wooden building on top of concrete slab which shield the parking structure